Activating Shift

Positive cultural change can only happen when all employees recognize and interrupt harassing behaviors, support coworkers, and affirm coworkers' experience.

What is organizational culture?

Simply put, it is the personality of an organization

- A system of shared beliefs, values, assumptions, language patterns that governs behaviour in a workplace.
- These shared values have a strong influence on how the people in the organization work and interact.
- A shift in workplace culture requires a recognition of the explicit and implicit characteristics of the culture and a sustained effort over a significant period of time in order to effect change.

Culture is like an iceberg - it's the underlying elements that will sink an organization

Understanding Gender Based Harassment and Violence-GBHV in the Workplace

Gender-based violence or harassment is committed against someone based on their gender identity, gender expression or perceived gender

It most often targets women, transgender people and gender non-conforming or non-binary people.

Rates of violence and abuse are also higher for people who experience social marginalization and exclusion i.e., Indigenous people, immigrants and refugees and people with disabilities.

Shifting Organizational Culture

- Gender Based Harassment and Violence is not simply an issue of compliance.
- Organizations need to first address the underlying power imbalance and behavioral norms that ignore or condone GBHV in the workplace.
- Various actions are needed to alter workplace culture, infrastructure and processes.
- Changing organizational cultures must be intentional and requires a plan

Shifting Organizational Culture

Impact- Survivors and co-workers

- Trauma caused by GBHV can result in social isolation, negative physical and mental health, absences or tardiness, work interruptions, decreased productivity and concerns about job security
- Gender-based violence and harassment also impacts colleagues of those directly involved, whether they witness the violence or are affected by the aftermath.
- More than 30% of survivors of intimate partner violence say their co-workers were impacted, often due to stress or concern about the survivor experiencing violence.
